

To use adverbs in writing.

Steps to success:

- 1) Explain what a verb is.
- 2) Explain how an adverb changes a verb
- 3) Give examples of adverbs

What is a verb?

think

said

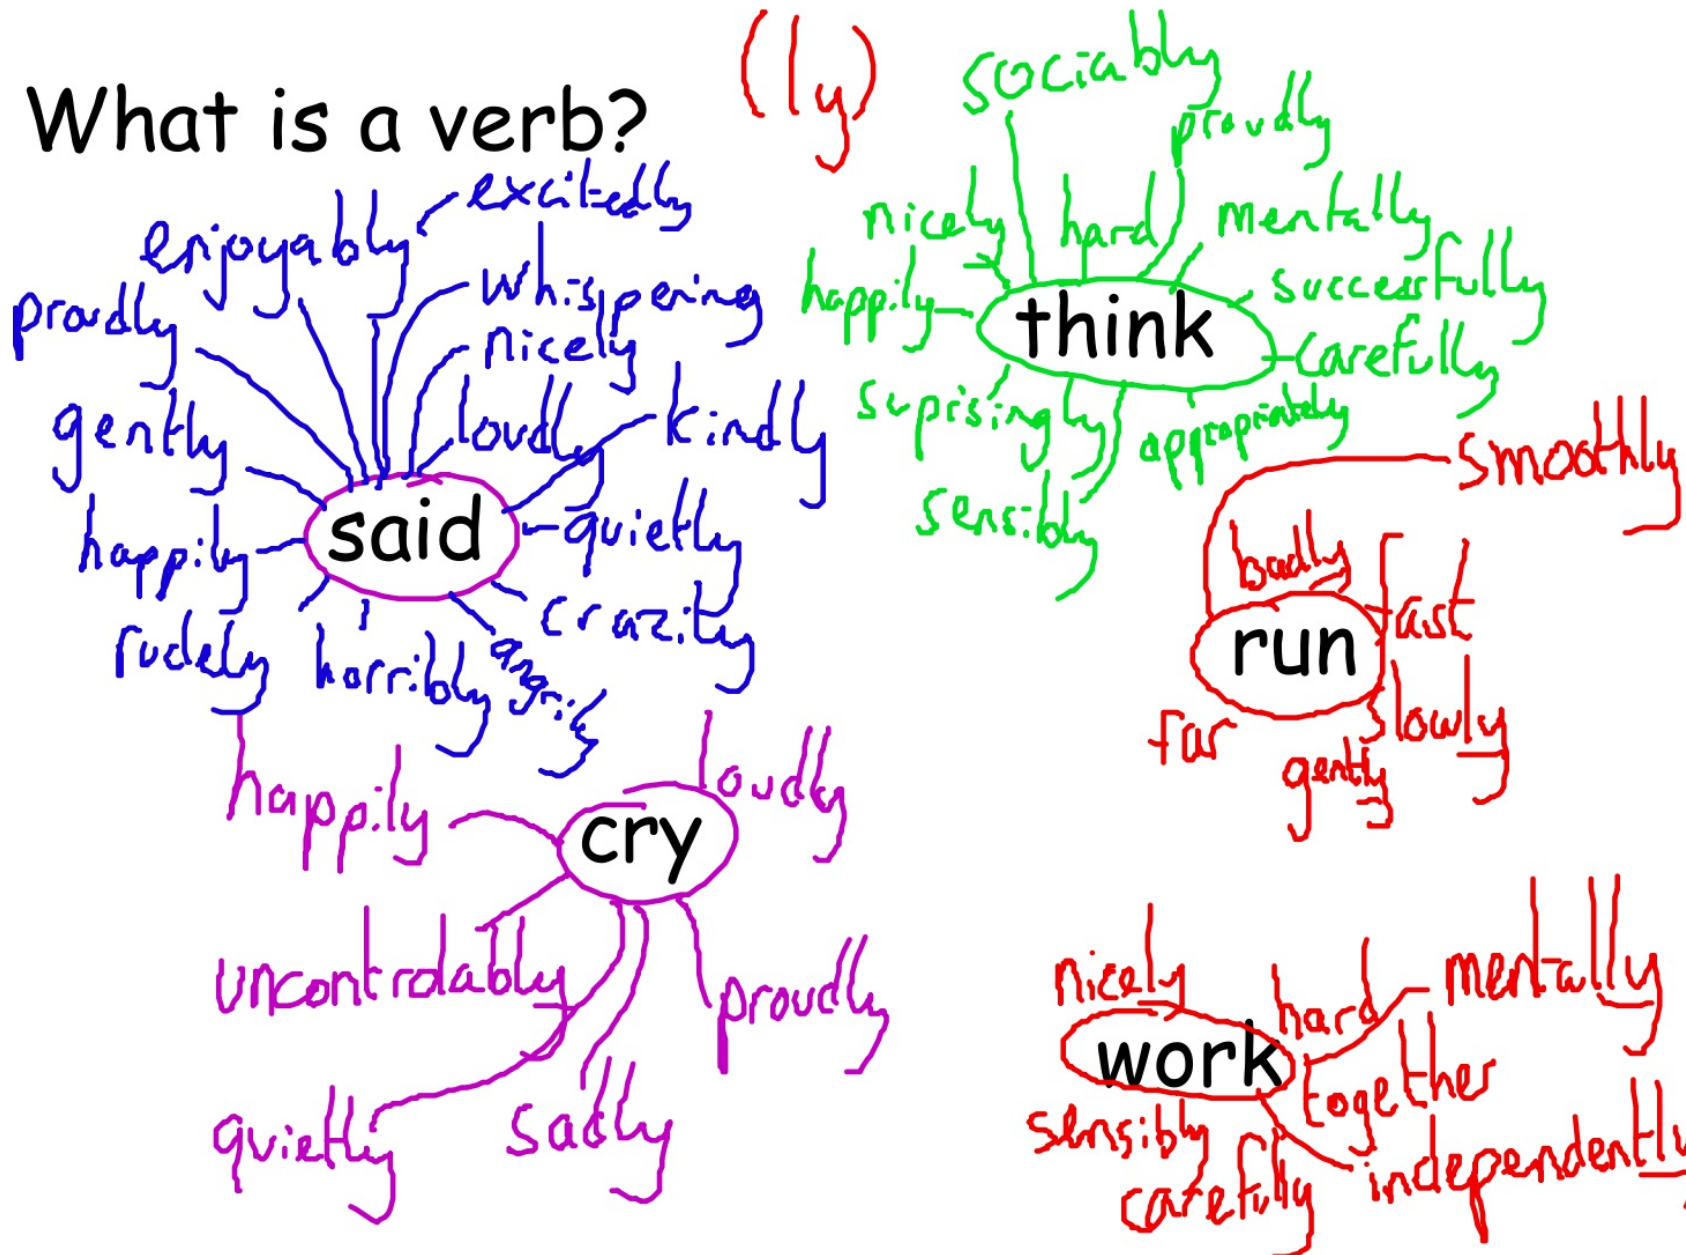

run

cry

work

Can you think of adverbs to go with these words?

What is a verb?

Can you think of adverbs to go with these words?

To use adverbs in writing.

Use these words in your cloze:

quickly	easily	furiously	miserably
happily	excitedly	loudly	cautiously
nervously	slowly	sluggishly	brightly
enthusiastically	warmly	sadly

Use a ruler to underline the connectives. First ones are 'and' and 'but'

The storm did not last all night and the thunder rolled _____ over the village and blew itself out before the dawn appeared _____ on the horizon. The rain that had poured on the houses and the street had stopped but it had made large puddles on the ground. The day broke with bright sunshine and in the little cottage at the furthest end of the village - closest to the gates of the house on the hill - it streamed _____ through the crack in the thin curtains of Jack's bedroom.

Jack stirred as the light fell _____ on his face and he opened his eyes. The warmth made him feel sleepy and he _____ shut them and tried to return to his wonderful dream. He had been with his parents and they were _____ on their way back to their house from a day in the park. Jack had played games _____ with his father and his mother had made a delicious picnic. In the afternoon he had played _____ with his kite that they had bought him for his birthday. They were laughing as they walked down the street and sang silly songs _____ that his mother had made up and he knew that what he wanted most was for the day not to end.

quickly	easily	furiously	sadly	miserably
happily	excitedly	loudly	enthusiastically	cautiously
nervously	slowly	sluggishly	warmly	brightly

To use adverbs in writing.

depressed
feel embarrassed

play

eat

move